PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE COURT OF APPEALS FOR SUMMIT COUNTY, OHIO

Petitioner, by and though his attorney, Ralph B. Maher, prays that a Writ of Certiorari issue to review the judgment heretofore entered against him by the Court of Appeals for Summit County, Ohio.

OPINIONS BELOW

The Supreme Court of Ohio rendered no opinion. The unreported opinion of the Court of Appeals for Summit County, Ohio is printed as Appendix A.

JURISDICTION

The Supreme Court of Ohio dismissed Petitioner's appeal and overruled Petitioner's motion for leave to appeal on June 30, 1977. Said orders are set forth at Appendix B and C respectively. On September 22, 1977, Mr. Justice Stewart extended the time for filing a petition for writ of certiorari to October 28, 1977. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked pursuant to the provisions of Title 28--United States Code--§1257(3).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether a motion to suppress evidence should have been overruled where said evidence was obtained as a result of a warrantless unreasonable search of the sleeping occupant of a parked car in light of the fact that the searching police officers testified they did not believe the occupant had committed, was committing or was about to commit a crime

2. Whether the Court of Appeals for Summit County, Ohio, erred in upholding the above mentioned search by expanding the narrow emergency exception to the Warrant Clause to include a situation where police officers were merely responding to a call "4" which symbol stands for "possible intoxicant," and where said officers had no probable cause to search.

3. Whether the subsequent full body search of the person by the two police officers outside the vehicle and the resultant seizure of a weapon are authorized when said police officers testify that the search and seizure were both made prior to any arrest and upon a person not known to be armed and not believed to be dangerous.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED

United States Constitution, Amendment IV

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the person or things to be seized.

United States Constitution Amendment XIV, Section 1

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On December 14, 1975, at about 6:00 P.M., Petitioner left the gasoline service station he owned and operated to make a night bank deposit. He made this trip in his 1966 Thunderbird and brought with him a .38 caliber revolver, which he placed in a belt holster located underneath his jacket. After making the deposit he proceeded to a V.F.W. Club located in his Akron, Ohio, neighborhood, and after sticking the revolver between the console and the seat of the car, he went in and had three or four drinks of liquor. He left the Veterans Club around 8:00 P.M. and started back towards his service station. While enroute along a lightly travelled residential street he realized that he was getting sleepy or feeling some kind of reaction. He therefore pulled over to the opposite side of the street and parked the car facing traffic by placing two of the wheels on the berm and two of the wheels on the street. (Tr. pp. 71, 88).[1] He then turned off his motor, while leaving the headlights on.[2]

1. Tr. refers to the Reporter's Transcript of the proceedings in the Common Pleas Court of Summit County, Ohio.

2. The Court of Appeals mistakenly stated in its opinion that the engine was left running. (App. A, infra, pp17,19). Of the five witnesses who testified, only Officer Burrell stated that "the engine was running." (Tr. p. 76). Officer Sparks couldn't recall whether the engine was running (Tr. p. 7). Petitioner, witness Paul Brunson and witness Annie McLane, who had observed

Subsequently Witness Annie McLane, who lived across the street from where Petitioner parked his car, went to the home of Witness Paul Brunson to discuss the matter and then called the Akron Police Department to report that there was an individual parked in front of her home with the headlights burning and his head lying on the steering wheel. Two Akron policemen, Officers Robert Sparks and Michael Burrell, received a signal "4", which roughly translates to "suspected intoxicant," over their radio and arrived at the scene at 8:55 P.M. The Officers testified that there had been no reports of any violence, emergencies, or criminal activity in the neighborhood and that they were not looking for either a 1966 Thunderbird or a person fitting Petitioner's description. At the time of their arrival in the quiet residential neighborhood the only persons on the street were Witness McLane and Witness Brunson and his wife.

The Officers approached the scene by pulling their patrol car behind Petitioner's automobile so that their headlights shined through his rear window. Officer Sparks approached the car from the rear on the driver's side while Officer Burrell approached from the rear on the passenger's side. They both observed that Petitioner's head was still lying on the wheel. At that time neither Officer had any inkling that Petitioner was armed and both stated that they weren't afraid of him. Both officers testified that when they arrived they didn't know what was wrong with Petitioner although Officer Sparks smelled what he believed to be alcohol. Officer Sparks further testified that to his knowledge Petitioner "had not committed a crime, was not committing a crime and was not about to commit a crime." (Tr. p. 30). Similar testimony was given by Officer Burrell, (Tr. p. 97), who also described the situation as a "rather peaceful scene." (Tr. p. 96).

After surveying the situation, Officer Sparks proceeded to reach inside the automobile and shake Petitioner by the shoulder about four or five times. Prior to Officer Spark's entry into the car the the Trial Court found that Petitioner's slumped position and the 3/4 length winter jacket he was wearing prevented the Officers from observing anything around his person. However, as the shaking progressed, Officer Burrell testified he saw something hanging from Petitioner's side.

After the repeated shaking of Petitioner, he was awakened and told to get out of his car. No resistance was given by the Petitioner, and he was searched while spread-eagled against his car. According to the Officers' testimony the empty holster was located under Petitioner's coat and then the revolver was found in his rear pocket. Officer

Sparks then advised him he was under arrest for carrying a concealed weapon and finally advised him he was being arrested for intoxication.[3]

On March 13, 1976, Petitioner was indicted for carrying a concealed weapon in violation of Section 2923.12, of the Ohio Revised Code, and, secondly for having a weapon while under disability, in violation of Section 2923.13(A) (2), of the Ohio Revised Code. The federal

3. The Court of Appeals mistakenly stated in its opinion that the holster had been seen by one officer while Petitioner was still in the car and that as soon as he got out of the car he was arrested for intoxication. (App. A. infra pp17 - 19). Both officers testified they did not know Petitioner was wearing a holster while he was in the vehicle. (Tr. pp. 9, 82, 86). The Trial Court confirmed this in his Findings of Fact. (Tr. pp 53, 132). The record is also clear that Petitioner was first searched outside the car and then arrested. In fact this scenario was presented by the State of Ohio in the statement of facts included in its answer brief filed in the Court of Appeals for Summit County. At page three the Prosecuting Attorney stated that when the revolver was found in his rear pocket, "Appellant was subsequently placed under arrest for carrying a concealed weapon and intoxication." Both Officers testified that after the search outside the vehicle the Petitioner was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon and intoxication. (Tr. pp, 20, 23, 102 and Transcript of Preliminary Hearing pp. 5-6.)

questions sought to be reviewed by this Court were raised in the court of first instance on June 3, 1976 when Petitioner filed his motion to suppress evidence, said motion being set out as Appendix D. The motion to suppress was overruled at a hearing in the Common Pleas Court of Summit County, Ohio, held on June 21, 1976, and June 22, 1976. The Petitioner then entered a "no contest" plea to the two counts of the indictment. The journal entry overruling the motion is printed as Appendix E. The Petitioner was sentenced to the Chillicothe Correctional Institute, and said sentence was held in abeyance and his prior bond was continued pending appeal. Subsequent to the decision of the Court of Appeals for Summit County, Ohio and the Supreme Court of Ohio, the same bond was continued to apply during this appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

On July 22, 1976, timely notice of appeal was filed, and on February 2, 1977, the Court of Appeals of Summit County, Ohio, affirmed the judgment. The opinion of the Court is set out as Appendix A. Petitioner's assignments of error to the Court of Appeals which raised the federal question presented in this petition are included in said opinion. On March 4, 1977, timely notice of appeal was filed; and on June 30, 1977, the Supreme Court of Ohio dismissed Petitioner's appeal and overruled Petitoner's motion for leave to appeal, said orders being set forth at Appendix B and C respectively. The propositions of law presented in the Supreme Court of Ohio which raised the federal questions sought to be reviewed in this Court are printed as Appendix F.

REASON FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

THE DECISION BELOW REGARDING THE CONDUCT OF THE RESPONDENT IS CONTRARY TO THE FOURTH AND FOURTEENTH AMENDMENTS OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES AND RELEVANT DECISIONS OF THIS COURT.

The Court of Appeals for Summit County, Ohio, "deemed the situation as it existed at the time the officers responded to the call '4' to be an emergency." (App. A, infra p.20) On the basis of this finding the Court held that the search of Petitioner both inside and outside of his parked automobile was neither improper nor unreasonable. In reaching its decision, the Court made no finding that the police had probable cause to search Petitioner in his parked car at the time Officer Sparks entered the vehicle.

Fifty-two years ago in Carroll v. United States, 267 U.S. 132, 156 (1925) this Court held that in the absence of probable cause to search an automobile, the Fourth Amendment protects the owner from the use of the seized items as evidence against him. Since that time, "in enforcing the Fourth Amendment's prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures, this Court has insisted upon probable cause as a minimum requirement for a reasonable search permitted by the Constitution." Chambers v. Maroney, 399 U.S. 42, 51 (1970).

In its most recent decision in this area, this Court stated that there are "significant differences between motor vehicles and other property which permit warrantless searches of automobiles in circumstances in which warrantless searches would not be reasonable in other context." United States v. Chadwick, 97 S. Ct. 2476, 2484 (1977). Yet, "although the expectation of privacy in an automobile is significantly less than the traditional expectation of privacy assoicated with the home,. . . (citing cases). . .the unrestrained search of an automobile and its contents would constitute a serious intrusion upon the privacy of the individual in many circumstances. South Dakota v. Opperman, 96 S. Ct. 3092, 4000-4001 (1976). (Powell, J. concurring). The search and seizure in this case constitute just such circumstances.

The Court of Appeals upheld the search in this case simply by stating it was pusuant to an emergency. Initially this finding is contrary to the testimony of the searching officers themselves, who testified that a rather peaceful scene existed at the time they surrounded Petitioner's car. Moreover, the sua sponte determination by the Court of Appeals that the emergency search doctrine applied was made without citing any precedent from this Court. In effect the Court ignored the fact that the Carroll doctrine is not applicable unless there is a conjoining of the two elements of probable cause and genuine exigent circumstances. This Court has pointedly stated that "the Carroll doctrine does not declare a field day for the police in searching automobiles. Automobiles or no automobile, there must be a probable cause for the search." Almeida-Sanchez v. United States, 413 U.S. 266, 269 (1973).

The Officers' testimony at the suppression hearing demonstrates that none of the specifically established and well-delineated exceptions to the exclusionary rule, including "search incident to arrest,[4]" Preston v. United States, 376 U.S. 364 (1964); "hot pursuit," Warden v. Hayden; 387 U.S. 294 (1967), consent, Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218 (1973) and the "plain view" doctrine,[5] Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 403 U.S. 443 (1971), are applicable here. In light of this Petitioner can only conjecture that the real reason behind the decision of the Court below is an unwarranted feeling that this Court's recent holding in South Dakota v. Opperman, supra, that probable cause to search is not needed when law enforcement officers pursuant to standard procedure are conducting an inventory of an unoccupied properly impounded vehicle, should be interpreted as a virtual overruling of the prior precedents discussed herein. Initially unlike the search in Opperman, the search in this case was conducted in an occupied vehicle and under circumstances where an investigatory police motive was present. Moreover, at the time of the search, Petitioner was asleep in the privacy of his own parked automobile.

4. The arrest here did not occur until after Petitioner was searched outside the vehicle.

5. While Petitioner was slumped forward, nobody could observe anything. (Tr. P. 135).

Throughout all court proceedings Petitioner has focused his argument on the fundamental principle pronounced in Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347, 351-352 (1967), that "the Fourth Amendment protects people, not places. . .what (a person) seeks to preserve as private, even in an area accessible to the public, may be constitutionally protected." This Court recognized the privacy interest the occupant of an automobile possesses in United States v. Ortiz, 422 U.S. 891, 896 (1975):

> "a search, even of an automobile, is a substantial invasion of privacy. To protect that privacy from official arbitrariness, the Court always has regarded probable cause as the minimum requirement for a lawful search."

The decision below disregards this interest and thus squarely presents the question of the continued validity of the core of this Court's prior precedent in this area.

Petitioner also contends that the conduct of the Officers in conducting the full body search outside the vehicle was unconstitutional. The search and seizure were conducted prior to the time the Officers testified Petitioner was placed under arrest. Therefore the holding in United States v. Robinson, 414 U.S. 218 (1973), and Gustafson v. Florida, 414 U.S. 260 (1973), that where there has been a lawful custodial arrest incident to a traffic infraction there may be a subsequent full search of the arrestee, is inapplicable. Since the search and seizure in this case were not made incident to a lawful arrest, the police officers were subject to the limitations placed by Terry v. Ohio, 392 U.S. 1 (1968) on searches based on less than probable cause. The clear holding of Terry v. Ohio , ibid, is that "'when an officer is justified in believing that the individual whose suspicious behavior he is investigating at close range is armed and presently dangerous to the officers or to others,' he may conduct a limited protective search for concealed weapons." Adams v. Williams, 407 U.S. 143, 146 (1972), citing Terry v. Ohio, supra at 24.

In this case both officers testified that they did not believe Petitioner was dangerous and that they did not fear him. They also did not know he was armed. Thus there is nothing in the record to indicate that even the minimal standards of Terry were met. The police had initially exceeded their authority in searching Petitioner inside the vehicle. They subsequently exceeded their authority in conducting a full body search outside the vehicle when they did not believe he was armed and dangerous. In essence a search and seizure were performed which were within the purview of the Fourth Amendment, see Terry, supra at 16; and which were not within any of its narrowly drawn exceptions.

If the decision of the Court of Appeals is permitted to stand Petitioner's "freedom from unconscionable invasions of privacy, and the freedom from convictions based upon coerced confessions," Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643, 657 (1961) would be irreparably damaged. The decision authorizes police conduct that is in no way consonant with "the purpose of the exclusionary rule which 'is to deter - to compel respect for the constitutional guaranty in the only effectively available way - by removing the incentive to disregard it.'" Mapp v. Ohio, ibid, at 656, citing Elkins v. United States, 364 U.S. 206, 217 (1960). Consequently, this Court should grant certiorari in order to reassert the fundamental Fourth Amendment rights Petitioner has been denied.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

Defendant-Appellant) SUMMIT COUNTY, OHIO
CASE NO. 76 1 118

DECISION AND JOURNAL ENTRY

Dated : February 2, 1977

This cause was heard December 15, 1976, upon the record in the trial court, including the transcript of proceedings, and the briefs. It was argued by counsel for the parties and submitted to the court. We have reviewed each assignment of error and make the following disposition:

HUNSICKER, J.

On June 23, 1976, the defendant-appellant, John Guyton, entered a plea of no contest to an indictment for "carrying concealed weapon" and "having weapon while under disability." The trial court, after hearing the statements of counsel and based on the facts of the case as found by the court, sentenced Guyton to Chillicothe Correctional Institute. The sentence was ordered held in abeyance pending an appeal.

Prior to the plea of no contest, a motion to suppress evidence was filed. This motion alleged that the search of the Guyton automobile was unlawful, the search of the person of Mr. Guyton was unlawful, the physical evidence including a loaded .38 caliber revolver was obtained as a result of the illegal arrest and all fruits of the search incident to the arrest of Mr. Guyton must be suppressed. The motion to suppress was overruled and the no contest plea followed.

On appeal to this court, the appellant says:

"1. The trial court erred in overruling the Motions to Suppress Evidence seized after a warrantless search which was totally lacking in probable cause which search might even had been made in good faith, but where there were no exigent or emergency circumstances, and when said search was made prior to any arrest.

"2. The trial court, based on the above proposition, erred when he overruled the Motions to Suppress Evidence seized after a routine search of a motorists (sic) person, and a subsequent arrest for two other non-related traffic offenses, including a weapon, unless the Officer or Officers have probable cause for believing he is armed and dangerous.

"3. The trial court, based on the proposition in Assignment of Error No. 1, erred when he overruled the Motions to Suppress Evidence seized from Defendant-appellant and from a given 'area,' to wit: the inside of Defendant-appellant's motor vehicle, which he seeks to preserve as private, even though said 'area' may be accessible to the public, and thus should be constitutionally protected, inasmuch as the Fourth Amendment protects people, not places.

"4. The trial court, based on the proposition in Assignment of Error No. 1, erred when he overruled the Motions to Suppress Evidence, where the Exclusionary Rule covering evidence obtained by an illegal search and seizure, should have been followed, as there were none of the judicially recognized exceptions to the Rule,."

The entire basis of the appeal and the assigned claimed errors raised the question of the validity of search and seizure in this case. We shall discuss together the assigned errors.

On December 14, 1975, John Guyton, was found slumped over the steering wheel of his automobile by two Akron Police Officers who came to the location at the request of their dispatch officer. The officers said it was 8:55 P.M.; the Guyton automobile was parked in the opposite direction to traffic on the left side of the street; the lights of the vehicle were lit, and the engine was running. The officers with some effort awakened Guyton. While awakening Guyton, one officer noticed he had a gun holster fastened to his belt. They also noticed Guyton, before alighting from the automobile "was moving his hand around by his right leg, couldn't see nothing in there at that time." The officers said they had their guns drawn at that time as a safety precaution. The officers on patting Mr. Guyton down found the loaded .38 caliber revolver mentioned above.

The officers said that, as soon as Mr. Guyton got out of the automobile, they arrested him for intoxication. The offense with which he was ultimately charged is "C.C.W," that is carrying a concealed weapon. Counsel for the defense questioned the officers as to the time when the arrest for intoxication took place, before or after the arrest for carrying a concealed weapon. Defense counsel agrees that if the first arrest was for the offense of operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol of which Mr. Guyton was guilty, then search and seizure was lawful. There apparently was no great time period between the first and second arrest, whichever came first. It was all a part of the transaction of investigating a suspicious vehicle parked unlawfully on a public highway with an incapacitated occupant under the steering wheel

Mr. Guyton operated a Sunoco gasoline station. On the night of Sunday, December 14, 1975, he testified that he took the receipts from his business to a bank where he could deposit it. He said he went to the Clark gas station on Copley Road, Akron, Ohio to buy cigarettes, then went to the V.F.W. Club. He did not take the gun he carried to the bank, into the club but hid it in his automobile. He drank a few drinks then drove his automobile "down Copley Road." Mr. Guyton said he is a diabetic and when he felt "strange in the head," he pulled over and stopped. The police came and the events detailed above took place. Mr. Guyton said the revolver was in the automobile between a console of his 1964 Thunderbird and the seat. Mr. Guyton said it was at this hiding place where the police found the revolver; the police said they took it from his pocket.

Under the facts of this case as found by the trial judge, based on the evidence submitted to him, were the officers justified in taking the action which they did in conducting a "search and seizure" of Mr. Guyton's gun?

We are impressed by the excellent opinion written by Judge Sherer of the Second Appellate District in State v. Call, 8 Ohio App. 2d 277. We see no need to again repeat the exhaustive survey of Federal cases set out in that opinion. In the Call case, the arrest was for a traffic violation and no complications. In the instant case, there was a traffic violation with other features. Did a vehicle parked against oncoming traffic, its lights on, motor running and the driver slumped over the steering wheel, present an emergency situation? We belive it did. The officers did not know if the driver of the vehicle was ill, dead, suffering seizure or from what cause. It could be false action by a dangerous person. The officers had a duty to be careful and use caution to protect Mr. Guyton, a large man physically, and to protect themselves.

When Mr. Guyton was in the vehicle, one officer saw the holster and when Mr. Guyton was patted down, the gun was found in the pocket of the appellant. The situation is neither the Call case nor the case of State v. McCray, 46 Ohio App. 2d 106 (1975).

This court has examined the authorities concerning search and seizure under emergency conditions in State v. Love, Summit #7631 (9th Dist. Ct. App., April 30, 1975). We adopt herein the conclusion of that case on that subject. We deem the situation as it existed at the time the officers responded to the call "4" to be an emergency. The conduct of the officers was neither improper nor unreasonable.

The judgment is affirmed.

The court finds that there were reasonable grounds for this appeal.

We order that a special mandate, directing the Court of Common Pleas to carry this judgment into execution, shall issue out of this court. A certified copy of the journal entry shall constitute the mandate, pursuant to App. R. 27.

Immediately upon the filing hereof, this document shall constitute the journal entry of judgment, and it shall be file stamped by the Clerk of the Court of Appeals, at which time the period for review shall begin to run. App. R. 22(E).

PROPOSITIONS OF LAW FILED IN IN THE SUPREME COURT OF OHIO

PROPOSITION OF LAW NUMBER 1

A warrantless unreasonable search and seizure, which were totally lacking in probable cause, which search and seizure might even have been made in good faith, but where there were no exigent nor emergency circumstances, and when said search and seizure made prior to any arrest are illegal, and any evidence no matter how reliable, acquired as a result of an unreasonable search must be suppressed. A routine search of a motorist's person, and a subsequent arrest for two other non-related traffic offenses, including a weapon, unless the Officer or Officers have probable cause for believing the Defendant is armed and dangerous, result in any evidence seized being excluded and inadmissible.

PROPOSITION OF LAW NUMBER 2

The Exclusionary Rule covering evidence obtained by an illegal search and seizure, should have been followed, as there were none of the judicially recognized exceptions to the Rule, including, but not limited to the following:

(a) A search incident to a lawful arrest;

(b) The stop and frisk doctrine;

(c) Hot pursuant;

(d) Consent by the Defendant-Appellant;

(e) The plain-view doctrine;

(f) Emergency Searches where crucial evidence might be lost or destroyed;

(g) Contraband;

(h) Mail searches;

(i) Moving vehicles;

(j) Goods in the course of transit;

(k) Health and safety inspections;

(l) Instrumentalities of crime;

(m) Fruits of crime;

(n) A crime having been committed, being committed or about to be committed;

(o) Any other criminal activity;

(p) Etc.

PROPOSITION OF LAW NUMBER 3

It is a violation of Fourth Amendment rights if the conduct of Government Agents violates the privacy upon which an individual justifiably relies. The Fourth Amendment guarantees protection against unreasonable searches and seizures. There has been a determination of constitutionally protected areas, including but not limited to, homes, taxicabs, and automobiles. Without probable cause for arrest and without a Warrant for search and arrest, all evidence seized from the Defendant-Appellant, and from a given "area", to wit: The inside of Defendant-Appellant's automobile, which he sought to preserve as private, even though said "area" may be accessible to the public, should be constitutionally protected. The Fourth Amendment protects people, not places, and such evidence must be excluded and inadmissible.
